

Badong

The book of Genesis speaks of a man named Jubal, son of Lamech and Adah, master of the lyre, and most notably, a descendant of the infamous Cain. We never hear anything about old Jubal aside from a couple of sentences. Perhaps it's of no importance that he has contributed nothing but the gift of musical virtuosity, or that his tainted lineage overshadows the fact that he is considered "the father of all who play stringed instruments." Maybe anyone who dares to break the silent indifference of an uncaring world is just guilty by association, and maybe that's why God hates musicians.
